ELECTRIFYING SHOCKER!

Housewives FRY Rapist

AVENGING housewives strap Roberto Barbosa into a homemade electric chair as they prepare to execute him for the rape and murder of their best friend.

When the man who raped and murdered their best friend was freed on a technicality, four outraged housewives lured the killer to an abandoned warehouse — and fried him in a homemade electric chair!

"These women took a brutal rapist and killer off the streets and gave him what he deserved," said Carlos Silva, an attorney representing the housewives. "They simply did what the system failed to do."

The four women are now facing murder charges themselves in the execution of 39-year-old Roberto Barbosa, whose body was found strapped into a homemade electric chair in Sao Paulo, Brazil.

According to authorities, Barbosa, a plumber's apprentice, confessed to the rape and murder of Maria Ramos. Barbosa admitted breaking into the 36-year-old woman's apartment, locking her two small children in the bathroom and stabbing the helpless mother to death after he'd sexually assaulted her.

But a judge in the case ruled that the confession could not be used against Barbosa because the cops had said. "One of the women, Carmen Vicente, talked about it with her electrician brother, and he joked about building an electric chair for them."

The attorney said his clients hired Carmen Vicente's brother to build the electric chair in an empty warehouse near the plumbing company where Barbosa worked.

After the electric chair was finished the women chipped in to have the power turned on at the warehouse.

"On the day of the execution three of the women had to the warehouse Silva said. "He followed her and when she ducked into the warehouse, Barbosa went in after her.

"Carmen Vicente came armed with her husband's .38 revolver," Silva said. "She pulled back the hammer and told Barbosa to sit down in the only chair in the place.

"They strapped him down, attached the electrodes and told him why he was about to be executed. Then they threw the power switch."

PEARL divers are working overtime to meet the demand

Japs cash in on Barbara Bush!

By HOWIE FISHER

Japanese divers are working around the clock to cash in on a pearl boom sparked by First Lady-to-be Barbara Bush — who wears them all the time!

"She's the best thing to happen to the industry since we figured out how to put pearls on strings," broker Nasu Murata told reporters in Akita, Japan.

"Our divers can't work fast enough to meet demand. Everyone wants pearls as they see how Mrs. Bush."

Washington insiders say Mrs. Bush has always had an affection for pearls but few people were aware of it because she kept such a low profile during the eight years that husband George Bush was vice president.

All that changed when Bush won the November presidential election — which rocketed his wife into the limelight.

Since then she has been photographed thousands of times — always with a double or triple-strand pearl choker draped stylishly around her neck.

Her passion for pearls sparks national craze & keeps Japanese divers busy around the clock

"I don't want to sound disrespectful, but she's become a living, breathing advertisement for pearls," Murata told newsmen.

"Women automatically look up to the wives of American presidents.

"Every time Mrs. Bush appears in public with pearls around her neck she's telling them that they can look like a president's wife if they do the same. She could really boost pearl sales by as much as $100 million a year.

"That's the kind of influence she's going to have over the fashion world in the United States."

French fashion designer Jean-Paul Gillet couldn't agree more.

In fact, he told newsmen that he is going to create a new line of clothes that incorporate both genuine and artificial pearls.

"Mrs. Bush is a classy, classy lady," said Gillet. "Sooner or later, women all over the world are going to recognize it. They're going to want to look just like her."

Oddly enough, Mrs. Bush prefers artificial pearls to the real thing.

"That's all the better for women of modest means," said Gillet.

"They can emulate Mrs. Bush without breaking their budgets by wearing fakes like she does."

THE new First Lady is almost never photographed without her pearls — to the delight of the pearl industry.

This shark had a high-fiber diet!

It took Korean fishermen 10 minutes to sift through the stomach contents of an 18-foot blue shark caught off the Japanese island of Hokkaido.

Whopping real estate deal will rock the universe!

Space aliens put Earth up for sale!

A leading scientist says space aliens have staked a claim on our planet — and put it up for sale!

"Our world is going to the highest bidder and we can only hope that the buyers are friendly," Dr. Tom Meerbach, the Dutch astronomer, told reporters in Amsterdam.

"The wrong kind of civilization might strip Earth of all its resources.

Such a civilization might not care anything about the welfare of men — they might even send us packing.

"The mineral deposits alone would give our planet a price tag of $3,000,000,000,000 — at least — in intergalactic currency," said Dr. Meerbach.

The expert's report was met with plenty of skepticism but he claimed to have more than enough evidence to support his view. "The simple fact that space aliens and UFOs visit Earth proves that we've got something they want," said Dr. Meerbach.

"I also think we can assume that these extraterrestrials came here from more than one planet — and that the first visitors staked a claim. That claim would entitle them to one or dozens or Earth, as they wish.

"I truly believe that every UFO we see is carrying a potential buyer.

"The planet is for sale."

Herbert Klaus, the West German UFO expert, couldn't agree with the Dutch expert more.

In his 1977 pamphlet Our Fate Is Ours, he argued that earth is a strategic point in the universe — and would figure prominently in any alien extraterrestrial's plan to conquer space. "If our planet isn't important then why do so many extraterrestrials come here?" he asked rhetorically.

"I don't want to cause undue alarm, but we've got to face facts.

"Earth is definitely a prime piece of real estate."

BIZARRE JAILHOUSE REUNION

Sisters separated 25 years ago meet again — in the slammer!

Two women made a startling discovery while serving time in the same prison on drug charges — they were sisters.

And to make the stranger-than-fiction story even stranger, publicity about the bizarre twosome uncovered Frank Deeping, 25, a half brother they never knew — and he's in prison, too.

Frank Deeping

Joyce Lael, 27, and Mary Jones, 29, got into a conversation while waiting to see a doctor at the Women's Correctional Center in Columbia, S.C.

They soon learned some amazing background about each other.

Both were born in Fort Gordon, S. Their mother's name was Shirley Jones, they had a brother named Billy Jones, and their dad was in the military. They also looked alike.

Their suspicions were confirmed a month later by a longtime family sters, who had been separated by their parents' divorce 25 years ago in 1962.

"It's like a dream," said Mary. "After all these years apart."

Joyce was less than 2 years old when their parents split. Mary and Billy went with their father while Joyce was left with her mother, who was pregnant with Frank.

Joyce later was adopted by another couple and moved from Columbia to Hamberg, S.C. Frank went to live with a family friend when he was three days old. Later, he was adopted by another couple.

two half sisters whom his adoptive mother, Nellie Deeping, read him a newspaper article about their prison reunion.

"A miracle. That's what you call it, a miracle," said Frank.

"I'm happy, excited. I'm 30 years old and I've got two sisters. I can't wait to see them." But Frank may have to wait awhile. He's serving 12 years in a Columbia prison on drug, burglary and larceny charges. Mary is on a work-release program and Joyce will be in prison at least two more years.

'Oh my God, it's Albert!'

Shocked widow catches dead hubby on fishing trip

By ALEX JACKSON

"Oh my God, I've caught Albert," screamed newly widowed Wendy Scherer, who went fishing with her lover and snagged her dead hubby, who had been buried at sea.

Shocked Wendy fainted dead away when she saw the zippered body bag with the inscription, "Albert Scherer. Born May 21, 1926 — Died Oct. 12, 1990."

"She thought she was rid of the old guy forever and he pops right up out of the ocean as if by magic . . . and on the end of her line," said Jan Wyatt, a former neighbor of Wendy in Moruya, Australia.

Wendy, 42, had charmed Albert into marrying her three years earlier. Though she was 18 years younger than the wealthy builder, "they had one thing in common," said Mrs. Wyatt, "his money."

"Albert craved to be every bit whether it be furs, jewelry or fast cars," said Joan Cavanagh, a former business associate of Albert.

But trying to keep up with a woman young enough to be his daughter finally caught up with old Albert. He suffered a heart attack and died three days later.

Wendy inherited his $3 million estate because there were no children and no close relatives. He told Wendy with his dying breath he wanted to be buried at sea.

"Albert was deathly afraid of being put in the ground and he didn't want to be cremated," said undertaker Anthony Simmons.

But Wendy didn't want to waste any of her millions on an expensive funeral. She had her hubby's corpse sealed in the body bag, weighted down with two 5-gallon buckets of concrete and tossed in the Tasman Sea, 10 miles offshore from their mansion in Moruya.

A week after her hubby's burial, the rich widow was out fishing in her new $200,000 yacht with her tennis pro boyfriend, Ken Richardson, and their pet sailing pals.

"I've got a big one. I've got a big one," squealed Wendy as her fishing rod bent.

Richardson rushed over to help her reel it in. "We knew it was a big one," he said. "We didn't know it was Albert until we saw the body bag."

The young widow was revived but had to be sedated later when she became hysterical. "You can imagine the shock," said Richardson. "I'm afraid it'll be awhile before she's over it."

Mortician Simmons said a rope that attached the backsis of concrete to the body bag broke loose, allowing it to float almost 30 miles to where Wendy and her friends were fishing.

Tragic girl eats cigarettes, soap & cat food!

Her bizarre disease is driving mom nuts!

By SUSAN JIMISON

Little Anne Holloway lives to eat, but if left alone she'll eat until she dies.

The tragic 4-year-old, a victim of Prader-Willi syndrome, will gobble down anything trying to satisfy her endless hunger — even cigarette butts, cat food and laundry soap. She has to be watched constantly to prevent her from harming her health.

"We are under tremendous strain — there is no hiding that," said her mother, Irene Holloway of Liscard, England. "All the time she is asking for things — even though she knows what my answer will be."

The answer is "no," of course, because like all Prader-Willi kids Anne would eat constantly if permitted to do so. Her ailment makes her unable to settle when she is full and she could balloon up to weight overnight.

Anne's parents have to feed her a special low-calorie diet and lock away food in the kitchen so the child won't eat behind their backs.

Still, the Holloways have found their desperate daughter eating wallpaper, tissues, soap powder, cat food, cigarette butts and toilet paper.

They find candy bars in the freezer, the only appliance they cannot lock.

The Holloways know there is no cure for their daughter's condition, which is a genetic abnormality. Her best chance for a long life is to eat moderately, even though she throws tantrums and tries to sneak food behind her parents' backs.

If she were allowed to eat as often as she liked, Anne would soon die of health problems related to obesity. It is not uncommon for Prader-Willi victims in their teens to weigh as much as 500 pounds if they're not restricted.

"Anne eats what the rest of us eat — but smaller portions," Irene says. "People ask, 'Don't you hate your daughter because she is like this?' but the truth is I love her more."

BRAVE mom Irene Holloway watches her daughter Anne constantly so the little girl won't eat herself to death

Commie hater swears by X-rated bumper stickers!

A patriotic ex-Marine who fled communist Cuba stood up for his rights and won when cops said he had two obscene bumper stickers on his pickup — that said RUSSIA SUCKS.

"No, I won't do it," replied Jose Proenza-Sanfiel when a Florida Highway Patrol trooper told him to remove the stickers.

"Russia stinks. Russia is communism. That's why I served four years in the Marines . . . to help fight communism and keep America free," said the cocky St. Cloud, Fla., veteran.

Jose's refusal to remove the anti-communist stickers prompted the trooper to charge him with violating the state's new obscene bumper sticker law. He faced a $500 fine and six months in jail. "I could have ripped off the bumper stickers and saved myself a lot of hassle, but any proud American should stand up for what he believes in . . . and Russia sucks," said Jose, 34, who immigrated to the U.S. from Cuba 20 years ago.

Jose won his battle when Assistant State Attorney Charles Tiffany refused to prosecute the case, saying the bumper stickers were political but not obscene.

No jury could be persuaded to convict him, said Tiffany.

Dropping the charge should have satisfied the stubborn ex-Marine, but it didn't. He has vowed to continue fighting for free speech.

"I cannot allow them to get away with that," he said. "I have a good case against the law. I cannot allow them to deny it and suppress the free speech of everyone else."

SUPER patriot Jose Proenza-Sanfiel vows not to remove the anti-Russia bumper stickers the state says are illegal. He says his message is political, not obscene.

9-year-old saves burning pal

A 9-year-old boy saved the life of a playmate who caught fire in a gasoline explosion with a technique he learned in kindergarten!

Jacob Walsh of Pasadena, Tex., recalled that he should "stop, drop and roll" a victim of fire and did just that when a gasoline-soaked model volcano exploded, drenching 8-year-old Kim Porter in flames.

"I panicked a little, but 'stop, drop and roll' is what I thought of first," Jacob said.

Thanks to the boy's quick reaction, young Kim survived the fiery blast. He was hospitalized in fair condition with burns, authorities said.

Fat banker wins big victory

Peter Peter Hay won his battle with bank bosses he claims canned him for being blimp-sized — they're giving him an apology and $14,000.

The 230-pound Toronto, Canada, man slapped the Toronto Dominion Bank with a complaint to the Human Rights Commission after he got the ax.

Peter claimed he was fired for being fat.

"Corporate Canada has got to realize they can't mess with people because they don't like their physiques," said the 38-year-old behemoth.

Bank bosses denied they fired Peter for his bulk. But they have agreed to give him an apology and $14,000 in exchange for dropping his complaint.

"I'd like to think of this as a victory for anyone who's been discriminated against," said Peter.

BUNGLE IN THE JUNGLE

SICK as a dog. A whole tribe of New Guinea natives got roundworms from munching on poisoned locusts.

LOCUSTS have become the New Guinea natives' favorite food since the tribe stopped practicing cannibalism.

Cannibals get sick after eating bug-sprayed locusts

By LAUREL BOWIE

An entire tribe of reformed cannibals stumbled into a jungle hospital holding their stomachs and groaning in agony after feasting on a scrumptious swarm of locusts — covered with insecticide.

"We spent years teaching these people that it's wrong to eat each other, so now they have decided there's nothing tastier than a big, fat locust," said Dr. Gunnar Damsgaard, a former missionary in the wilds of New Guinea.

"Of course, they don't cook them or anything. They just catch them by the thousands and gobble them down alive."

But it wasn't the icky critters themselves that left 300 bug-happy savages nursing longing stomachaches last month near the village of Okiba.

Agriculture officials had sprayed the grasshopper-like insects with poison the day before — forgetting they were dousing the natives' favorite dish with arsenic.

"Fortunately, everyone recovered nicely and local biologists even offered an official apology," the Danish medical doctor recalled after returning to his Copenhagen home.

"They also promised never to spray their dinner again."

Dr. Damsgaard said members of the wacky Waruda tribe took a liking to locusts a decade ago after missionaries persuaded them to give up dining on neighboring tribesmen.

"The great swarms that regularly overrun that region provide a good source of protein for the natives, and they've decided the creatures are a real delicacy," the disenchanted doc told reporters.

"They are undoubtedly the only people in the world who relish the coming of locusts."

The bug-crazy natives have devised special nets to capture the delectable insect invaders.

"They catch them and everybody comes running over and starts downing them like popcorn," Dr. Damsgaard said.

"You have to have a cast-iron stomach, but that's no problem for a former cannibal."

Cats are more popular than dogs

Cats have moved ahead of dogs in the American pet popularity sweepstakes for the first time ever, a new survey reports.

There were 54.6 million pet cats living in the U.S. in 1987, compared with 52.4 million pet dogs, according to a study done for the American Veterinary Medical Association.

HERO pig Priscilla swims with Anthony Guck, the boy she saved from drowning, and his mom Carol.

Spoiled rotten pig gets the boot!

JAMMED Jerome, Priscilla's son, had been living high on the hog with owner Victoria Hocharia in Houston until local bureaucrats told him to move out.

City bigwigs send pampered porker back to the farm

By JOE BERGER

Jumbo Jerome is a cuddly pig who thinks he's a prince. As the son of a true hero hog, the pampered porker had grown used to living in an air-conditioned home with his own maid, his own phone — and his own private swimming pool.

But now, blacklisted bureaucrats have uprooted the city-slicker pig from his ritzy Houston, Tex., home — and forced him to live in a stv like a common country hog.

"Jerome is absolutely miserable, and so am I," said his heartsick mistress Victoria Hocharia. "He's used to having his teeth brushed every day and he's used to getting his stomach rubbed.

"He doesn't like it out there with all that dirt and mud."

The super spoiled, 700-pound porker is the son of Priscilla, the swimming sow who risked her life to save an 11-year-old boy from drowning in a lake outside Houston four years ago.

Plucky Priscilla was hailed as a hero — and until recently, storybook Jerome was reaping the rewards of his mom's daredevil deed.

The adorable oinker had free run of Victoria's comfy home, taking his baths in her tub and his naps on her bed.

He had his own private pool in the backyard and 24-hour maid service courtesy of his mistress, who fed him everything from burgers to pie to peppermint candy — and brushed his teeth after meals.

"Jerome thinks he's a person because that's the way he's been raised since he was 10 days old," his devoted owner told reporters.

But not long ago, animal control officers came knocking and announced that the sweetheart of a swine had to go because pigs aren't allowed to live in the city.

Victoria was stunned because she figured only petty Jerome had been carrying his own weight, helping her collect food and supplies for Houston's homeless.

"We have parties here and hundreds of people come bringing canned goods and other donations for homeless people — and Jerome's always the drawing card," she said.

"So many people never get to see a hog up close."

Now, grieving Jerome is stuck in a muddy old sty in the country and Victoria is waging war with the city council to get him back in his own little hog heaven.

The determined lady's gathered thousands of names on petitions urging the council to modify the law to bring Jerome home. And she's even erected a billboard pleading for fair play for her prized oinker.

But at least until she gets a hearing before the council, heartbroken Victoria has to reconcile herself with daily visits to her pig's new digs in the country.

"Jerome's always so happy to see me," she said. "He always comes running and squealing."

After six pregnancies failed, proud parents have miracle twins

Years of heartbreak ended in tears of joy when Diane Cancel and her husband Robert became the parents of twins after six failed pregnancies.

The Mays Landing, N.J., couple desperately longed for a baby, but time and time again Diane, 40, lost her fetus in the third month of pregnancy. They tried to adopt, but were told by adoption agencies that they were too old.

Finally on their seventh try at parenthood they hit the jackpot — and because the proud mom said dad of twins Gabrielle and Robert. The double delights keep the Cancels busy, but they're not complaining.

"They're miracle babies," Diane told The NEWS. "Everybody that knows us and the story of what we went through can't believe how lucky we are.

"We thought we'd try just one more time. It took and the pregnancy lasted. We're just delighted."

Diane says she and her husband, 44, had gone to doctor after doctor in their attempts to have a child. But after Diane had undergone surgery and treatment for a hormonal imbalance, most physicians advised the couple to forget having a baby.

Finally one obstetrician agreed to help the couple by providing a special monitor that would detect premature labor before it was too late to save the babies. With the help of this high-tech device and a long period of bed rest, the two perfect little ones arrived in late September.

"We just want people to know that there's hope even when everyone tells you to forget it," said Diane, who's staying home with the babies for the time being. "Keep seeking help and

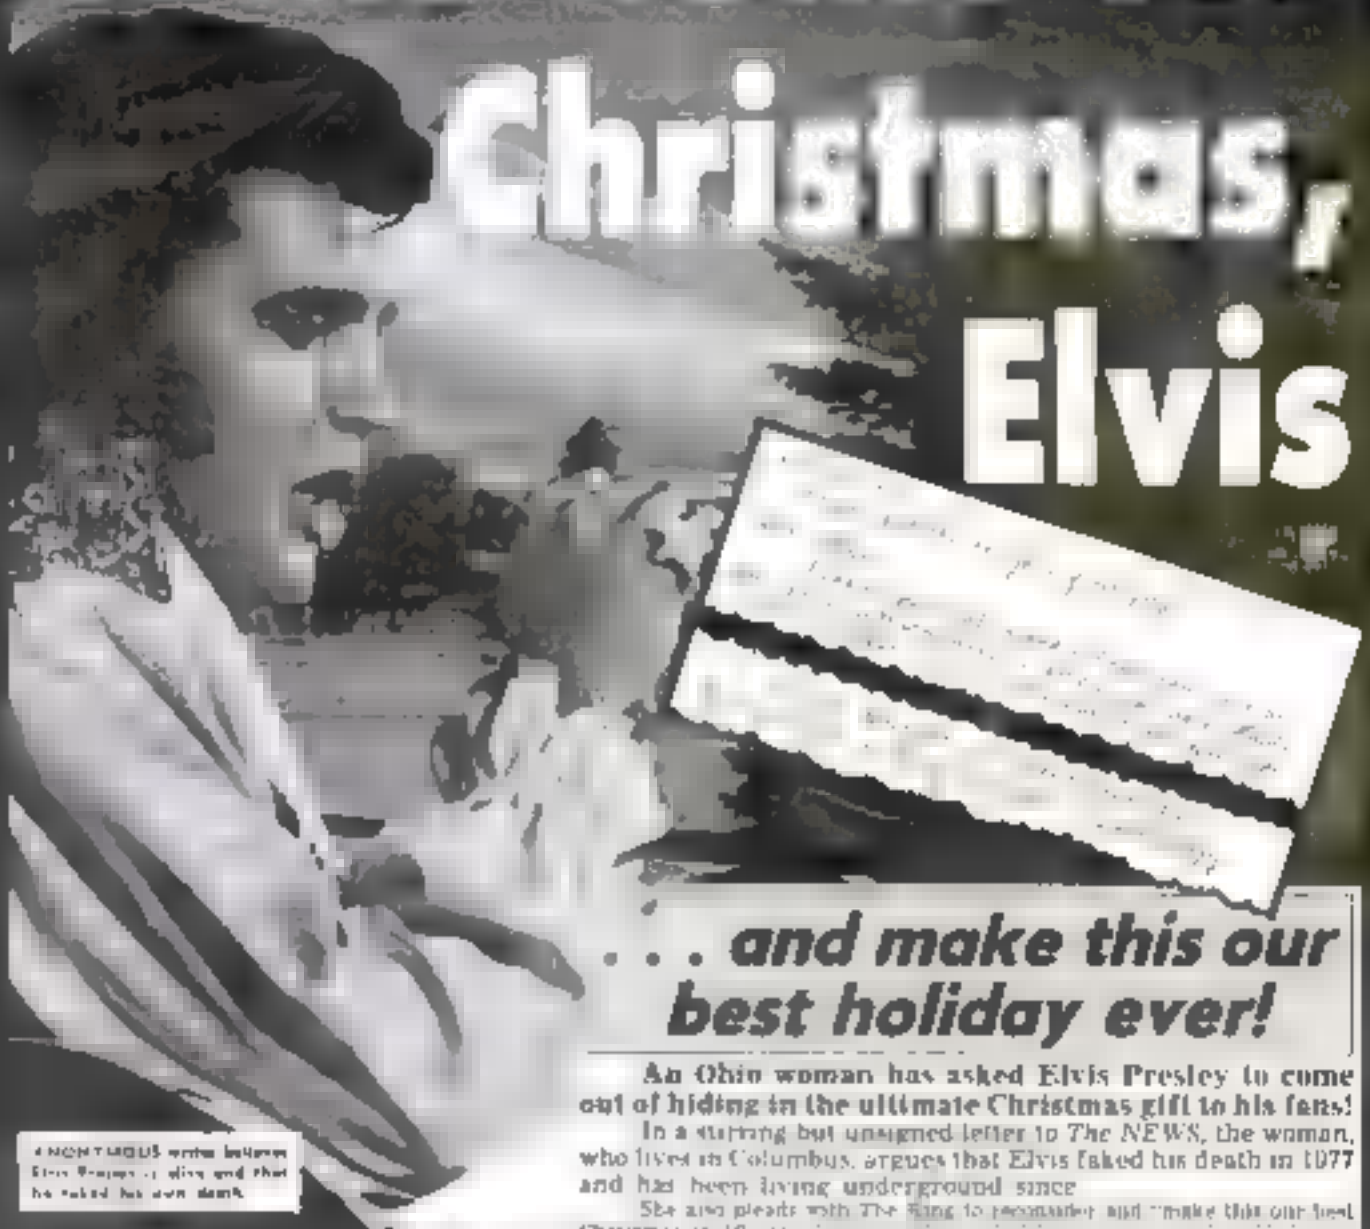
Fan's letter makes touching plea to The King:

Come home for Christmas, Elvis



ANONYMOUS writer believes Elvis Presley is alive and that he faked his own death.

. . . and make this our best holiday ever!

An Ohio woman has asked Elvis Presley to come out of hiding in the ultimate Christmas gift to his fans!

In a startling but unsigned letter to The NEWS, the woman, who lives in Columbus, argues that Elvis faked his death in 1977 and has been living underground since.

She also pleads with The King to reconsider and "make this our best Christmas in 10 years."

The entire holiday message goes to The King goes like this:

Dear Elvis, I know you're alive and I know you want to come back but circumstances [illegible] you back. Maybe it's the best that we've written about you after you supposedly died in 1977.

Maybe you think your records aren't what it used to be and maybe you think you're getting too old and fat. Well, that just isn't so. And even if it is, sit down, plan for your fans and maybe get on a weight plan.

And besides we loved Elvis for him and the way Elvis looked. You'll always look great to us, the fans that never forget.

We can't forgive you for pretending to be dead because we know that it must get too hard for you in the public eye. We understand, but it's just so hard to live with

Penny-pinching Palace shocker:

CHEAPO ROYALS PAY THEIR HELP PEANUTS

Could you be this mean to a nanny? Forget it, Queen Elizabeth and her family are as tight with their money as they are rich

England's royal family is worth over a billion bucks, but the tight-wad Queen and her kin are so cheap that they pay servants and others who work for them peanuts.

A shocking report on the House of Windsor's pay scale reveals that even snappy butlers get a measly $14,500 a year. Nannies chosen to care for royal babes get just $9,000 and maids at the Palace earn a penny-pinching $8,250 per year.

Skinflint Queen give[illegible]ids and [illegible]ss than $200 per week!

That's below poverty level in America!

"If your big hope just happens to be the Queen of England . . . as you can see, it's no way to get rich quick," says the working report.

You'd think the chef who prepares the fabulous meals for the Queen of England would get paid accordingly, but not so. Most Palace workers get paid peanuts, seemingly for the huge honor of working there. Take former chef Graham Newbould. He got just $13,500 a year. He doubled his salary to $27,000 by taking a job as a chef at a hotel.

Royal butler Alan Fisher pulled down a paltry $14,500 working at the Palace. He left and nabbed a similar job in Tinseltown paying $45,000.

Ruth Wallis, 41, is nanny for Princess Di's boys Harry and William. As prized as these future kings are, the lady who cares for them pulls down just $9,000. Of course, she gets one day off each week.

But her salary is terrible compared to a page who makes $7,500, or a footman who makes $6,800 or a lady-in-waiting who pulls nothing — that's right, zippo! — Fair Lady magazine and London News of the World.

He made out his will and got ready for the Grim Reaper!

Ghost of dead wife tells hubby: You'll die soon!

. . . but he doesn't & he's upset with her — for lying to him!

By SUSAN JAMISON

Widower Frank Pesticcio made out his will after the ghost of his dead wife warned him he would die within weeks — and now he's upset because her prediction didn't come true.

The Cardiff, Wales, truck driver says he went through hell waiting for his date with death. But although his dead wife Palma said he wouldn't see his 56th birthday, he did, and he's still alive and in the pink.

"She appeared to me in the kitchen," Frank told The NEWS. "She stood in front of me and she looked very stern.

"She said, 'Don't worry about your birthday or Christmas cards this year — you'll be with me!' "

Frank says he was so convinced by the five-second sight of his beloved mate that he never thought to question her prediction.

He went right out and made an appointment with an undertaker and started making plans for his demise.

With his birthday only a few weeks away, there was no time to lose.

He drew up a will, leaving his home to his five grandchildren, set his other affairs in order and waited for his dying breath.

On the night of his 56th birthday, Frank says he sat up the night expecting the worst. But the hours passed and Frank didn't pass away.

"When I woke up the next morning I was so relieved to be alive," Frank said. "I got up and went to work just as usual.

"I didn't tell anybody about my wife's prediction. But I kept 24 hours a day. Whenever I saw a ghoul on the street I'd think of it. I have to admit — I'm still upset about it.

Frank says perhaps his beloved Palma wasn't trying to hex him but was actually preparing him for the fact that the two sons and grandchildren would ignore him during his birthday and Christmas.

He says he encountered a wardrobe and wife until Palma may have been trying to tell him she'd be there to keep him company and that he wouldn't entirely alone.

"Since she appeared I've started staying at home a lot, waiting to see if she comes back," Frank said. "I think she's in another existence waiting for me."

The couple had been married 38 years before she died a year ago.

IN HAPPIER days, Frank Pesticcio and his wife Palma pose for a photo at a restaurant during a

Dr. Christiaan Barnard, M.D.

"The deterioration of the quality of life due to the aging process has become one of my—and my co-workers—primary concerns. This led us to identify GSL (Glycosphingolipids) and the special properties which permit older skin to behave and look younger skin."
Dr. Christiaan Barnard, M.D.

The Glycel Story

Sold exclusively throughout America and in skin rejuvenation spas in America's leading cities, Dr. Christiaan Barnard's remarkable GLYCEL Formula is selling for $75.00. And many of America's most fashionable and elegant women are gladly paying the price.

Why?

Because GLYCEL is the rejuvenating cellular renewal formula recently developed at the famous institute in Switzerland by the famed heart surgeon, Dr. Christiaan Barnard, working with a team of top research cosmetologists.

What is the premise of GLYCEL?

In a word - "YOUTH".

America's most knowledgeable women are discovering that GLYCEL gives them a safe, reliable—surprisingly effective—alternative to expensive cosmetic surgery. As they use GLYCEL, their skin becomes more supple, more elastic, more firm. Wrinkles vanish. Many say that they feel like overnight magic the way their skin begins to look years and years younger.

As part of a national marketing test, Lida Enterprises has arranged for a strictly limited quantity of GLYCEL's three most popular and effective formulas to be made available to the general public at this special guest-house price! You would have to pay as much as $75.00 throughout America. But when you use your own enjoy your choice of Dr. Christiaan Barnard's most popular formulas for only $14.95 each! We want to emphasize that these are not "special versions" of GLYCEL. We are offering Dr. Barnard's actual, original GLYCEL formula, at the same packaging that is now being sold for $75.00. Also, we want to urge you to act at once. When these limited quantities are gone, we will not be able to make more available at these low prices. And you can mix and match. Any purchase of two formulas is yours for only $24.95, saving you an additional $5.90! And any purchase of three formulas is yours for only $34.95 you save $31.00!

"I have found GSL to be the key to skin rejuvenation and thereby the ingredient which will make skin behave and look younger"
Dr. Christiaan Barnard, M.D.

GLYCEL GSL CELLULAR ANTI-AGING CREAM

This amazing formula is often called "the fountain of youth" by anxious users! It contains the specific Glycosphingolipid which Dr. Christiaan Barnard isolated. Dr. Barnard called this ingredient GSL—and he and his research team found a much more abundant in young skin than in old skin. As we get older, the body reduces its production of GSL. And Dr. Barnard discovered that when aging skin is supplied with GSL, it can start functioning as if it were young again.

Top expert blames deadly plague ■ cruel African dictator

FAT IDI AMIN GAVE THE WORLD AIDS!

By PETE COOKE

Evil African dictator Idi Amin is responsible for the spread of AIDS!

That is the startling conclusion of Dr. John Dwyer, one of the world's leading experts on the dreaded disease.

Amin, who fled Uganda in 1979, when his bloody regime was toppled, has been blamed for countless atrocities committed against his enemies.

But now Dr. Dwyer offers shocking new evidence that it was Amin who created the conditions resulting in today's worldwide AIDS epidemic.

Dr. Dwyer, a top AIDS researcher and professor at the University of New South Wales in Sydney, Australia, said it has been well documented that AIDS was originally transmitted to human beings from African green monkeys.

The first person diagnosed as having the disease had a lasting affair with a Ugandan girl who [illegible] plied with chronic diseases such as malnutrition and malaria facilitated its passage, Dr. Dwyer said.

Indian troops serving in Uganda brought AIDS to the Western hemisphere. They transmitted it to residents of neighboring Zaire, where homosexuals [illegible]

Brutal bigwig could have stopped killer illness — but didn't

Uganda in 1985 when Idi Amin was rising to power through the military ranks.

Dr. Dwyer, author of The Body At War, said the desperate living conditions Amin imposed on the people of Uganda set in motion the population's explosive rise.

"If the virus started its march through Africa in Uganda, then the dreadful deprivations of the Amin regime [illegible] brutally contracted the disease," Dr. Dwyer said.

Dr. Claude M. Martin, the French AIDS expert praised Dr. Dwyer's research saying Amin was in a position to stop the virus before it became a worldwide epidemic. "Had he provided his people with even minimal medical care instead of living his own pompous life, we would have never heard of AIDS. The world has Idi Amin to thank for AIDS," Dr. Martin said.

TOO BAD Idi Amin is not pointing a gun to his head instead of a finger. He could have saved the world a lot of heartache and trouble.

Angry villagers stoned four pigs to death this week after killing family of ducks in a shed near a new Chinese restaurant — whose specialty is succulent Peking duck.

The plump Oliver pigs began disappearing soon after the All Seasons restaurant opened a few blocks away in Stamford Bridge, England.

"We had about 300 ducks in the village at one time and there doesn't seem to be many now," said villager Vic Sutton.

Restaurant owner Joseph Wan Lok denies any of the missing ducks ended up in his wok.

"I've heard these rumors but I don't know why anyone would believe them," he said. "My ducks come from big duck farms in Bradford and Hull.

"Sometimes they have feathers on and perhaps this makes people think they come from the canal," he said.

Suspicious townspeople said they have seen dead ducks at the restaurant with the feathers attached.

"The duck population in the village has certainly changed recently," said villager Kate Barker. "I suppose with the new Chinese restaurant opening people put them and eat them — still perhaps not five.

"Before the restaurant opened the building was a pub. Maybe locals will remember it for their drinking habits and the rumors began."

WOK 'n all the rest about! Yvet Wok Lok swears he doesn't eat the village ducks — he buys them.

Mom kept boy handcuffed in basement!

Sadistic sicko Larry Siemer faces life in prison for the brutal torture of a 7-year-old boy who was handcuffed in a basement for almost three months, beaten mercilessly — and forced to eat cat food!

The burly, live-in boyfriend of the boy's mother was convicted in Des Moines, Iowa, after witnesses told about Tracey Simmons' horrifying ordeal.

Larry Siemer

According to the trial testimony, cruel-hearted Siemer:

- Handcuffed the boy to a basement heat pipe and locked him in a closet.
- Starved the boy for weeks on end.
- Made Tracey's meat eat dog food.
- Burned the boy's genitals with scalding water.
- Beat him with a board.
- Hanged the boy by the hands with handcuffs from a basement pipe and taunted him by running the blade of a knife over the little boy's naked buttocks.

Tracey, his sister April, 10, and their mother had moved in with Siemer, 33, when their parents divorced.

In shocking testimony, April told a jury her little brother was allowed to attend school only two days on weekdays and all day on weekends.

Child had to eat cat food — or starve!

Tracey was tortured unbelievably," said Assistant County Attorney Melodee Hanes. "He was so afraid of his life he didn't tell anyone at school what was happening."

April said her brother was stripped naked and handcuffed to a basement pipe while Siemer ran a knife over the boy's buttocks, saying, "What do you think of this, smart boy?"

"The boy was fed very little and was forced to eat cat food on several occasions — or not nothing at all," said Miss Hanes.

"He was beaten with a board and submerged in a tub of water until he could barely breathe," she said. "He was really scared when Tracey was singled out."

The nightmare ended when one of April's playmates, Jennifer Weir, saw him handcuffed to the bed and told her mother.

Police were then notified.

Siemer was convicted of first-degree kidnapping, which has a mandatory life sentence. He is appealing.

Hospital shocker! Brain-dead patient used as surrogate mom!

Coma woman has couple's baby!

By BEATRICE DEXTER

Outraged officials are contemplating criminal charges against a couple who arranged a surrogate pregnancy — using a brain-dead woman to bear their child!

The unusual surrogate mom, an inmate in a public mental hospital, was implanted with a fertilized egg conceived by the unidentified pair and gave birth to a healthy baby boy eight months later.

"It's revolting, the most bizarre case I've ever heard of," fumed Octavio Bellocerra Ferreyra, head of the Citizens' Action Committee for Ethical Medicine in Buenos Aires, Argentina, where the history-making pregnancy took place. "What woman with this baby [can] say, 'Who is your mother?' what's he going to say — 'I was gestated by a corpse'?

"From the medical point of view, from the clinical point of view and from the legal point of view, this is monstrous."

According to reports in the Argentinian press, police in Buenos Aires are investigating the law with an eye toward bringing charges against the couple. Who they is not clear. Meanwhile, the pair are living in seclusion with their 2 month-old baby boy.

Through intermediaries, the mom parents have defended their novel procedure "somewhat" as a practical solution to the problems presented by an infertile surrogate.

"While there's a surrogate mother [who] changes her mind after the baby is born and refuses to give the infant up," said the new father, a 38-year-old businessman, "in this case, the woman has no mind to change. She is brain-dead, totally unaware of the world around her and is being paid to [be a surrogate]."

In effect, she's just a living person in all but in the strictest legal sense of a person who does have the command of a human being that is still [illegible] quality control but that is now being put to use in a wonderful way."

Adding to the parents' joy, the surrogate pregnancy was arranged with permission of the comatose mom's family.

The brain-dead young woman, whose name is Alicia Gomez, was injured in an auto accident 20 months ago and has been in a state of [illegible] ever since November, 1987. For an undisclosed fee, Alicia's family agreed to permit implantation of the couple's fertilized egg into the womb of the 24-year-old. Alicia was fed intravenously and received [illegible] during the course of the pregnancy.

She gave birth by [illegible] to a 6-pound, 7-ounce boy after eight months of pregnancy.

Nothing beats the taste of DIRT

By JACK ALEXANDER

Some folks can't stop smoking or have a thirst for booze, but Grace Johnson has a craving of a different kind — she's addicted to dirt.

. . . says gal who eats the stuff every day!

"I've tried to wean myself away from it with cigarettes, chewing gum and even cooking starch, but none of those things beat the taste of dirt," she told The NEWS.

Mrs. Johnson has needed a daily fix of dirt since she was pregnant with her first child 17 years ago.

She's partial to the Mississippi Delta clay near her home in Lexington.

"I put a pinch of dirt on my fingers whenever I feel the urge," she said.

"In an average day, I eat about a tablespoon."

The 35-year-old working mother of two had trouble explaining the taste of dirt.

"I guess you would say it tastes like all-purpose flour or like biting into a dry harvest of corn," she said.

"It really doesn't have a significant taste," she said. "You know when it rains how the earth smells? It tastes to me similar to what the earth smells like."

A survey in 1973 revealed [illegible] percent of the women in Holmes County, Miss., where Mrs. Johnson lives, regularly eat dirt.

The custom was brought from Africa to America by black slaves.

Dr. Dennis Fritz, a dirt-eating authority, said dirt generally isn't harmful to your health, but added there is a slight risk of ingesting parasites or ingesting the eggs with large amounts of clay.

Mrs. Johnson said doctors blamed her craving for dirt when she was [illegible] as a [illegible] of dirt."

Motorist's sign triggers attack

Lions eat macho hunter who broke into zoo!

Tough-talking teenager Harry Sayeda wanted to impress his pals by bagging an antelope, so he sneaked into an animal park late one night — and was eaten alive by a pack of lions!

When a shocked park warden stumbled onto the grisly scene the next day, all that was left of hapless Harry was a pile of bones, some tattered cloth-ing and his driver's license.

"The kid got too close to a cage in the zoo where they keep very hungry lions," police investigator Andrew Mangwende told reporters in the East African nation of Zambia here.

"They mauled him, tore him apart and gnawed him right into the cage with them. It was a terrible site. The lions had to be shot to get at it."

Explorer-writer Harry Sayeda bragged to his roommates across the river that he would save them money on their food bill by bring-ing down an antelope with bow and arrow.

"He boasted about what a great hunter he was," Mangwende said. His friends assumed he was going into the wilds to shoot something."

Instead, the inexperienced teen-ager broke into a game park outside the city of Mbeya. He shot the lock off the gate of the animal pen with a gun he had stolen from a night watchman, police said.

Sayeda climbed into the cage with the lions and began shooting arrows at them. But the animals were not impressed. They pounced on him and tore him to pieces.

Mangwende blamed the tragedy on the boy's bad temper. "Many people stole from the zoo," he said. "If only Sayeda had been a law-abiding man he'd be alive today."

Good marriage is great for health

Being married is still good for your health, a new study shows.

A sweeping survey by the National Center for Health Statistics found that married folks lead fitter, safer lives, visit the doctor less often and are generally healthier than single, divorced or widowed people.

Earlier studies showed a clear link between marriage and health, but researchers thought the pattern might have changed in recent years as being unmarried became more acceptable.

They found they were wrong

"In spite of recent changes in American marriage patterns, there is still a strong relationship between being well and being married," said a spokesman

"OL' MORT'S A PHONY"

Strip q[illegible] exclusi[illegible] at sizzling television talk

By JACK ALEXANDER

Loudmouth Morton Downey Jr. is a rotten hypocrite whose late night TV talk show is as phony as he is, say two strippers who were recent guests.

Kellie Everts and Yvette Paris, who said they were shamed and humiliated by toothy Mort, agreed to give readers of The NEWS an exclusive peek behind the show's palmtrax.

"The audience is stacked with Morton supporters who boo or cheer on cue," said Kellie, who has sued him for $40 million claiming he called her "a hooker, a pig, a slut and a tramp" when she appeared on the show. A spokesman for Downey said he would have no comment on the suit.

"We were told not to mention the show without mentioning Morton Downey Jr. We were told we would not be defamed or ridiculed," said Yvette. "It gave us the worst."

Nothing could have been further from the truth, she said. The audience was animal-like — like a truck load with Mort as the kingpin.

The two strippers, who danced Dance Coffee and both danced Andromeda were the featured attractions.

We were to talk about stripping and native dancing and they had a stage manager — an Italian guy who was supposed to entertain the moronic point of view," said Kellie.

One of Mort's cops met with the girls before the show and said the producer said if the fat slut and her friend hits — they said.

We were told to treat him like a pig, attack his manhood, ask if he still wears Jockey underwear and to remember we were on a program that respects," said Kellie.

As they went off stage expecting to go on they say Mort drew Kellie's ghost of the audience and say "That's a pig — that."

"For most of the show Mort degraded and humiliated Kellie and told her what a whore she was," said Yvette. "The whole point of the show was that strippers and topless dancers were immoral."

Mort's main theme is the corruption of the [illegible] and the [illegible] put the girls on the spot. "He would say, 'Should we let girls who take off their clothes run for public office?' "But she was the one up on the podium with her pelvis [illegible] said Yvette. "I'm an artist. It's all work. My Wendy's a [illegible] and told her.

The part [illegible] had been a total lie of it. She spent four hours writing a poem to him and it was [illegible] to her waistband when he shoved her off the stage," said Yvette.

"We never saw [illegible] on the show," said Yvette. "I thought we'd get a chance to express our point of view. I should have known [illegible] happen."

YVETTE Paris also claims she was ridiculed on Mort's show.

BAH HUMBUG!

COLD turkey dinners and unheated, drafty hotel rooms are a dream come true for holiday hating Scrooges like the famous character played by Albert Finney, below, in the movie musical "Scrooge."

Hotel offers Scrooges very un-Merry Christmas!

By JOE BERGER

Obliging innkeeper John Gallery is offering real-life Scrooges a chance to spend the holidays at his hotel — and have an absolutely miserable Christmas!

For a measly $70, skinflints and penny-pinchers can spend four bah humbug days at the Swallow Chase Hotel in York, England — in a room with no lights, no heat and no windows.

Grumpy guests who sign up for the Scrooge special will be served a Christmas dinner of cold turkey and water, and they'll get to eat it all alone in their room.

They'll also get a thimbleful of booze to warm their old, cold hearts on Christmas morning.

"This is an ideal package for people who hate — really hate — all the festivities and people that go with Christmas," said jolly John, manager of the Swallow Chase.

"It'll cost you next to nothing but we'll spare no expense ourselves to make sure your Christmas is as wretched as you want it to be."

Scrooges will be allowed to shop and visit at holidays

It's okay to suck your thumb!

Medical experts are now saying thumbs up to thumb-sucking toddlers.

It's a myth that kids who suck their thumbs are lonely and, according to the American Academy of Cosmetic Dentistry, thumb-sucking doesn't harm tooth development.

Besides, thumbs spoil dark, sticky and other hapless souls who don't want to be part of the festive season.

And supervising the whole dreary show will be Scrooge himself, Mr. Gallery, who predicts a chilly staff members for the entire four days.

"It can get real icy around here about this time of the year."

While sightseers are hobnobbing their way through the holidays, the rest of the guests will be eating, drinking and making merry Christmas every night around a glowing fire in the hotel lobby.

"There of us who want to will be having a ball," John said.

And if the Scrooges cry uncle and decide to join in the fun, they'll be welcomed with open arms — the minute they cough up an extra $130.

Doc hires drug mule's baby sitter

Dr Thomas Rowe Jr. has some good news for rum smugglers — he's figured out how to stop up the holes the drug couriers in their noses.

There's a hitch. Though The New York City surgeon won't help you fill up that abyss between you've kicked your habit. Then he'll operate, using cells from your own body to repair the hole.

Dr Rowe says the cocaine powder snorted by drug users causes holes to develop by cutting off blood vessels in the nose and starving the nasal tissue. Drug sleuths wind up with inch-wide holes in the septum between the nostrils.

After patients have kicked their habit, Dr Rowe says, they can have the hole repaired with a skin graft from the forehead.

But he won't consider the surgery for someone who's still tempted to use the drug.

"The reason is that if someone goes out and does cocaine again, they will get another perforation," the doctor said.

"There is no point in doing the surgery because the hole will come right back."

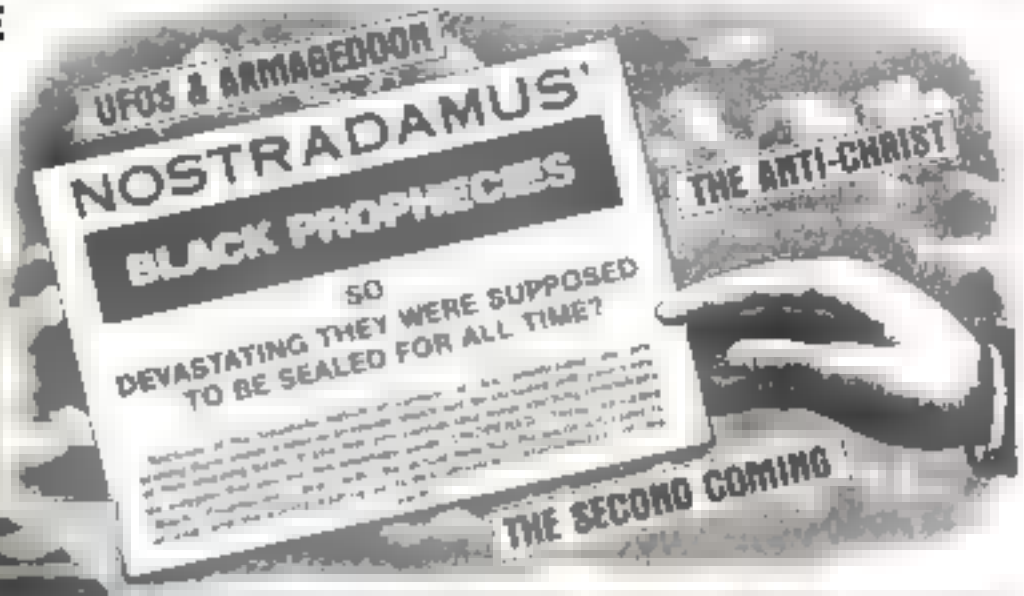
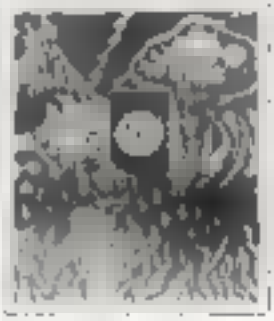
AN EXCLUSIVE HISTORICAL FIRST! HIS UNPUBLISHED PROPHECIES

DARE YOU READ THEM?



WAS HE A WIZARD? A SERVANT OF GOD? A [illegible] WORSHIPPER? OR A BEING FROM ANOTHER PLANET

PREDICTIONS WERE 100% A[illegible]URATE



Nostradamus is credited with being the greatest prophet of modern, non-Biblical times. His uncanny ability to foresee events as far ahead as the 20th century, produced such World Wars, awful battles, submarine attacks, rocket's appearance and much, much more, all told in the assassination of such dictators.

The man termed the world at the mystical and the female himself. His series of quatrains (four-line verses) predicting the rise and fall of Hitler, by one of his most startling predictions, has caused many historians writing the following in Nostradamus' "Century" quatrains, and who can say Pearl Harbor, Hitler's invasion of Russia, the launch of the Sputnik, the assassination of President Kennedy, the Watergate scandal, and the resignation of President Nixon.

Nostradamus' writings were also remarkable because Europe's most popular and renowned prophet, presented his renowned work a century before the 16th Century, perfect before were printed, published or the scientific age was very high.

He had an incredible childhood. He was very young when he mastered several languages and schooled with the scholars, became a famous physician at 30 the medical science, prepare nursing for months, survived watching his family disease. With a strange mixture of history and legend he portrays for the reader his own man in most visions of the centuries that incredibly capture throughout Europe as a result to today.

In his day, Nostradamus made enemies and kings and queens who were impressed by his ability to see into the future. His prolific source for and ability to live to help prepare us prepare some may be known about the other future years for many years. Many were disappointed or Nostradamus' fame and to assume some unreasonable, revolutions, and the assassinations that astounded among recently in most prominent figures.

THE SECOND COMING & THE ANTICHRIST

Though Nostradamus forewarned mankind of many catastrophes, the greatest has been of a totally unique way. He used a special device when writing. The device was basically a mask, used when he used in conversation with a friend of these and part of what Nostradamus also considered himself a very religious person, and while he was born a Jew, he later converted to the Catholic faith, claiming visions and his both practices in his work. Many of his predictions deal with the Second Coming of Christ and the Antichrist.

There are some who believe that Nostradamus was a great astrologer of his time and that his predictions were actually inspired. To give credence to this claim, the French seer was introduced to a young Frenchman who, a short while ago, was quite startling the world scientific world by his claim that he had been to Nostradamus' fortune. "Everyone I met here said that Nostradamus is dead," the young man said, "but I knew that was not true. I saw him, he told me his fortune, and he told me many things that have come true."

Because various Nostradamus' seer's have varied from the future or perhaps a being from another planet, as these questions are pursued in detail.

A curious [illegible] has been making the rounds of Europe which seems to substantiate what some Nostradamus' have said. He is now said to be [illegible] has been [illegible] of the world.

Shortly before his death, Nostradamus apparently burned a series of prophecies as anything which were not fully accurate at any of the predictions made. The woman who died because she was so ugly!

By HENRY WEBER

Tragic Marie Blankenship died because she was too ugly to get a job!

The 25-year-old woman from Xenia, Ohio, suffered from a congenital defect that saddled her with a cleft palate, twisted nose, and one ear that prevented her sight, speech and hearing.

She underwent countless painful operations to correct her features. But the cost — and the pain — proved too much for her frail body.

Marie Blankenship's mother, Peggy Blankenship, the young woman's heartbroken mother, said:

"She was tired of being operated on. Tired of being hurt," her mom said.

"She lived for years in pain and then died because she was ugly. That made her mixed up. She got surgery she lost by week through 24 hours she could have lost life.

"She could live anything a face — but she couldn't live without work."

Mrs. Blankenship's inability to find a job was particularly troubling because she had worked so hard to get a bachelor's degree in personnel from the University of Connecticut.

"She was a beautiful girl with children but was told that her face was so hideous she might scare them."

In spite of her determination and bad luck, Miss Blankenship remained cheerful — and, many times, put her own situation and problems down. "I've had a good self-esteem," she said.

In an interview before her death she said: "I am always the normal optimist. There is more to people than what they look like.

"If people can't get past my face and get to know me as a person, then they're the ugly ones."

Fed ... judge parks ticket outlaw in jail

By JACK ALEXANDER

Unpaid parking tickets kept piling up for deadbeat motorist David Smith until a judge finally got a belly-full — and sent him to prison for almost 2½ years.

"He's in a state of shock," said Smith's brother, John.

Stubborn Smith was jailed and sentenced in absentia by a Montreal, Canada, judge because he ignored the court's subpoenas and cops didn't know where to find him.

Smith, a 40-year-old independent translator, was jailed in Montreal from 1981 to 1983.

"Rather than pay the $5 fine for each ticket, Mr. Smith chose to ignore them," said municipal court clerk Wallace Stiles.

With penalties, the subsequent ticket fines finally totaled a total of $1,000.

Smith was also ordered to pay court costs of $1,000.

Smith's case came to the attention of police in 1983. He was given an opportunity to pay the fines, but refused.

Smith's brother said Smith had stopped, he was not a person.

"It may seem like a harsh sentence, but you can't ignore the court and get away with

Psychic with X-ray eyes looks inside people — & spots deadly diseases!

Medical experts are dumbfounded by the uncanny accuracy of a psychic who can detect a whole host of killer diseases simply by looking at people.

"His powers are so genuinely extraordinary that we've nicknamed him the Man with the X-ray Eyes," said world-famed Italian neurosurgeon Dr. Alfredo LaBrum.

"He can actually peer into a person's body and spot tumors, heart problems, lung and kidney diseases, neurological disorders — every life-threatening affliction imaginable."

The doctor said the miracle man demanded not to be identified for fear of being flooded with requests from people needing help.

"Just imagine the misfortunes who'd leverage from his clairvoyance was public knowledge," he said.

Dr LaBrum's remarks came after his return from a health conference in Oslo, Norway, where the Man with the X-ray Eyes demonstrated his incredible psychic powers to the world's top medical researchers.

"He was fantastic," said Dr Hans Ritter, a heart specialist from West Germany. "We asked the psychic to 'diagnose' 100 patients with known medical problems. These people were complete strangers — and there was no way the psychic could have advance information about their ailments.

"Yet, he described each patient's physical condition in meticulous detail."

"All I can tell you is that he's Portuguese, was raised on that country's island colony of Macao in the South China Sea and that he's been aware of his awesome talent since childhood," said Dr LaBrum.

"However, he never spoke of his psychic abilities for fear he'd be teased upon as a freak," Dr. LaBrum said.

"A year ago though, he visited a relative who was hospitalized in Hong Kong after a boating accident. He overheard the attending physician complain about his 'ulcer' — and promptly informed the man he was really suffering from a cancerous growth in his stomach.

"Tests revealed the Man with the X-ray Eyes was correct — and when he was asked how he had known, he replied: 'I can see into a person's body.' From that moment on, he decided to dedicate himself to saving lives. And, please believe me, he's been 100 percent successful. He's a medical marvel."

A suspected heroin smuggler whacked his tongue off with a pocket knife so he wouldn't be forced to tell cops the names of the kingpins he worked for!

"We've been a cop for 27 years and I've never seen anything like it. The guy must be stupid," U.S. agents Wade and Carpenter in Istanbul, Turkey.

"We busted into the guy's apartment on a tip and found him standing in the kitchen. My partner shouted 'Freeze!' but the dealer didn't listen.

"He stuck out his tongue and pulled a knife from his pocket. He sliced the tongue off with one quick motion and let it drop to the floor. Then he calmly bent his arm straight up in the air, stuck out his tongue and — as if to say, 'See, caught me red-handed. Let's go.'"

Raymond Kaz, a 31-year-old Frenchman with a long history of drug-related arrests, was jailed on a charge of possessing with intent to distribute a staggering 154 pounds of heroin, said the cops.

The stash, with a street value of at least $40 million, allegedly came from Iran and was headed for sale in either an Istanbul or Paris underworld.

Kaz, a mind-boggling interview with Turkish officials, said he was that he had to suffer all his hunger to save his life.

"The dark I took for would have killed me if I told what they were," he wrote.

"The way I figure it, the cops would have gotten their hands on a confession. So I figured there could make me talk — but they couldn't make me write." U.S. Dede confirmed that Kaz has refused to cooperate with investigators in spite of an offer to reduce the charge against him. If convicted, Kaz could spend the rest of his life in prison or be executed. The cop said:

"It certainly shows there's easy money in the drug business this cop should quit them otherwise," said Dede.

Garden nut swipes his neighbors' lawn tools!

DET. John Haggerty of the Calgary Police Dept. with some of the 700+ garden tools Carlos Cocman had stolen.

By JACK ALEXANDER

Lawn care nut Carlos Cocman sneaked around at night while his neighbors slept and stole their gardening tools — more than 700 of 'em, according to police.

When cops finally caught up with Cocman, 44, he had 318 sprinklers, 127 garden hoses, 108 shovels, 148 extension cords, two power mowers and two other lawn mowers.

"His basement and garage were piled high with hoses and the other stuff and in neat little piles," said Calgary Constable Kathy McGillivray.

"It was like walking into a gardening store — the shovels, sprinklers, extension cords were stacked in separate areas," she said. "He had about $1,000-worth of tools."

Cocman's one-by-one forays into the neighborhood ended abruptly one morning when Constable McGillivray and another officer watched him take a hose from a house in southwest Calgary.

"He was carrying two sprinklers at the time and had a list of area addresses with notations like 'hose' or 'sprinkler' written beside them," said Constable McGillivray.

She began patrolling the area after receiving dozens of complaints from homeowners about missing gardening tools. Even a police sergeant had his garden hose swiped. "People would wake up to find their sprinklers missing," said the constable. "The next day their garden hose would be gone."

"We began checking pawnshops and found out people in Cocman's neighborhood had been missing tools for about four years," she said. Cocman never admitted to actually stealing the gardening tools.

"He told the judge he either found them or someone gave them to him," said Constable McGillivray. "And he didn't explain why he needed them."

Judge Brian Stevenson did not believe Cocman, and fined him guilty on 18 counts of possessing stolen property.

"I find the explanations of the accused to be ludicrous," said Judge Stevenson.

Four Michael Lanigan celebrated his birthday a little too much — and wound up in jail.

The Orange, Conn., man was hosting a few at his 21st birthday party at a local restaurant when cops invaded the place and started checking IDs.

It was 11:15 on the evening of November 3 and Michael did not turn 21, Connecticut's legal drinking age, until November 4.

Michael and three other youths were taken in the police station and charged with underage drinking.

Heartless kidnapper buried victim alive!

A 26-year-old woman is facing a possible life prison sentence for helping her boyfriend kidnap a wealthy businessman and bury him alive.

Jurors in Kenosha, Ill., took less than two hours to find Nancy Rish guilty of murder and kidnapping for her role in the 1987 slaying of Malcolm Small.

Rish's boyfriend, Daniel Edwards, 21, was convicted earlier and sentenced to die.

Rish is facing a maximum sentence of life in prison without parole.

Small was kidnapped from his home and forced to withdraw $1 million from his bank account. He was then driven to a remote area, forced into a coffin-like box with a faulty ventilation system and buried in a shallow grave. Small suffocated before his family was able to pay the $1 million ransom demanded by the kidnappers.

Couple made adopted kids slaves, say cops!

Cops charged a factory worker and his wife with child abuse, claiming the couple forced their four adopted kids to work in the yard from sunup to sundown every day!

Children worked in the yard from sunup to sundown

"The neighbors said the kids worked from daylight until it got dark, like slaves," said Corporal Sammy Peavy of the Escambia County Sheriff's office in Pensacola, Fla.

Harold and Sherry Johnson adopted the children under a state program that paid the couple "approximately $700 to $800 a month" to care for the kids, Cpl. Peavy said. "We believe that they only adopted the children for the money," Cpl. Peavy said.

According to investigators, the Johnsons' two natural children were well-fed and well cared for, unlike the adopted kids.

"The adopted children were fed a diet of bread and black-eyed peas," Cpl. Peavy said.

"They had to eat on the back porch while the family ate inside. The adopted kids had to use a bucket and a garden hose to bathe on the porch and used holes dug in the backyard for a bathroom."

The two girls ages 13 and 9 and the boys ages 12 and 8 were forced out of the house at daylight to work in the yard, Cpl. Peavy said.

"On school days they would work from dawn until it was time to go to school and then they'd be back in the yard working after school until dark," said Cpl. Peavy. "On weekends and during the summer they spent the whole day out in the yard."

Police launched an investigation after one of the children ran away.

"Medical records showed that they had bruises upon arrival," Cpl. Peavy said. "They are all very thin."

Johnson, a 43-year-old factory worker, and his wife, 40, were each arrested on four counts of aggravated child abuse and held on $40,000 bail.

The four adopted children were placed in a foster home.

Mom cures her little boy — with hugs

Adorable Michael Selwyn used to suffer from autism, a condition that left him violent or withdrawn from the world around him. But his brave mom has cured him of his ailment — by cradling him in a hug of love.

By SUSAN JENSON

The London, England, kid, 3, has changed from a destructive, unhappy little boy who wouldn't even look into his mother's eyes to an affectionate toddler who loves to cuddle.

"The difference in Michael in just four months has been incredible," said the boy's delighted mother, Nicky Selwyn, who credits the miracle change in her son to the hugging technique called holding therapy.

She says her son now gazes at her lovingly, follows her with his eyes when she moves about their home and keeps peaceful and content for the first time in his life.

Little Michael was first diagnosed as autistic when he was almost [illegible]. The condition is generally regarded as incurable and experts are not yet certain what causes it.

Autistic sufferers are subject to sudden outbursts of anger and frustration. They frequently inflict their bodies or bang their heads [illegible] against walls and furniture. Little Michael had developed the habit of biting himself.

Michael's problems were much the same when Nicky and Tony Selwyn contacted a psychologist who specialized in holding therapy. With her help, Nicky learned to hold Michael [illegible] and calmly ministered to the [illegible] upset. As he sensed she cared, she continued to hug him in her arms until he gave up and relaxed.

Once calm, the boy could be taught to use words — not screaming rages — to express his feelings. Gradually Nicky and Tony began to notice a different boy. He no longer hated his baby sister or ignored her toys. His tantrums became less and less frequent as he learned new ways to relate to his world.

"Before he would only look at me or let me hold him with terror," Nicky said. "We were given no hope for his future.

"Now he's a different boy. We are so grateful we found a way to reach him," the overjoyed mom said.

NICKY Selwyn demonstrates how she uses the power of loving hugs to calm her autistic son Michael who used to suffer from violent outbursts of anger.

Mailmen's dog whistles are flops — they make the pooches meaner!

Red-faced postal officials admit the special dog whistles issued to hundreds of mailmen to ward off canine attacks were flops — because they actually made the dogs attack!

The special, high-pitched squeak produced by the whistle got dogs so mad they leapt after the wearer of the sound-screaming to the postal staff at Ilfracombe, England.

The whistle failure came hard on the heels of yet another disappointing deal — a spray called Repulse which was supposed to repel so much that [illegible] would run [illegible] for safety. "It wasn't much use," a postal spokesman said. "The dogs didn't seem to mind it, but it was very unpopular with users."

Despite these failures, the search for dog deterrents goes on because each year more than 4,000 postmen in Britain are greeted on by bad-tempered Fidos.

Postman Michael Cronk, who has been bitten 16 times, says he doesn't think anything will work.

"Honestly, if a dog is going to [illegible] he's going to [illegible]," he said.

Tiny muggers attack widow to steal her church money!

A 69-year-old widow on her way to church was savagely attacked and beaten by two fugitive boys — one only 7 years old — who were after her collection plate money.

The beastly boys dragged Mrs Thelma Bass kicking and screaming down the road when she refused to let go of her handbag.

Finally the boys, one 7 and the other 10, fled empty-handed, said Peterborough, England, police.

The woman, her glasses smashed and her head gushing blood from a vicious assault, staggered in to the Church of the Holy Spirit and was rushed to a hospital.

Police said they know the identity of the pint-size muggers. Both boys are runaways [illegible]

Dr Russell Fleming, a psychiatrist in Toronto, Canada, testified that the 43-year-old Vrbanic suffers from paranoia and thought his wife, Maria, of 16 years, was trying to kill him.

Vrbanic admitted stabbing his 40-year-old wife to death.

But he pleaded innocent to second-degree murder.

He was later found guilty by reason of insanity.

Psychiatrist Angus McDonald testified that the man knew what he was doing but acted out of a delusion [illegible] that his wife was out to kill him.

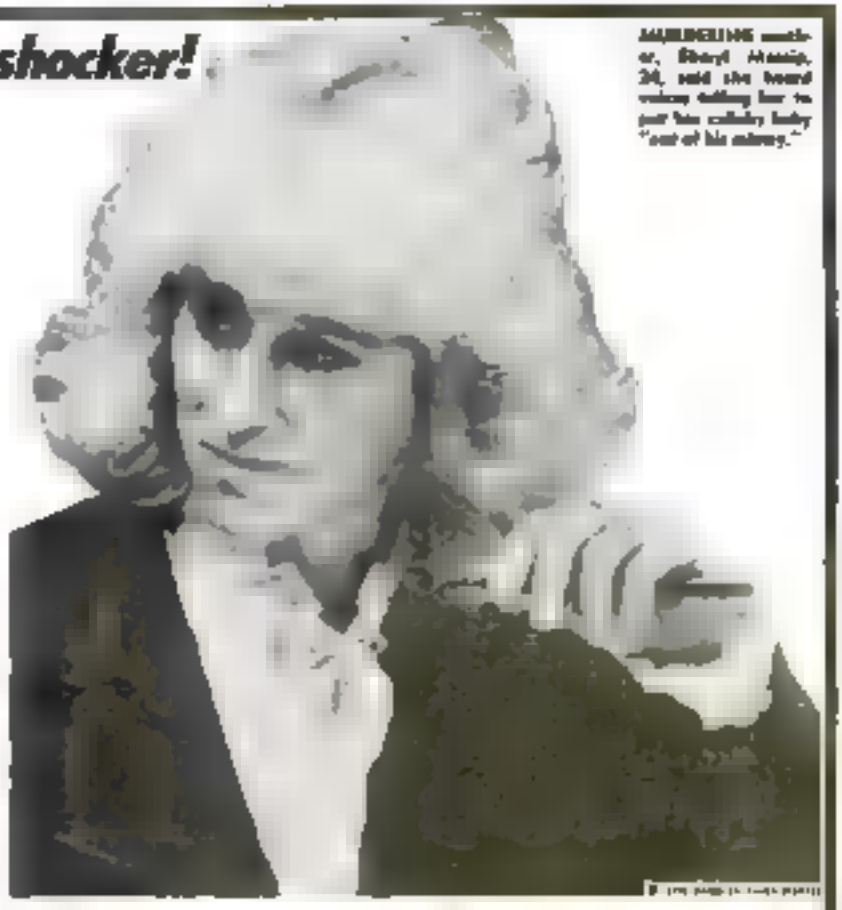
'BABY BLUES' MOM KILLS CRYING INFANT!

. . . by driving over him with her car!



MURDERING mother, Sheryl Massip, 24, said she heard voices telling her to put her colicky baby "out of his misery."

By PETE COOKE

A mom who explained that she had a case of the baby blues told her infant on the ground, drove over him twice and dumped his clay body in the trash!

The horror unfolded in a Santa Ana, Calif., courtroom where Sheryl Massip, 24, stood trial for the murder of her 6-week-old little son, Michael.

According to a court-appointed psychiatrist, Mrs. Massip was frustrated because her colicky baby cried 18 to 19 hours a day.

Defense witnesses testified that the baby's constant crying wore on the young mother until she couldn't wait [illegible] be bothered by a sister and often fled to her father's house for rest.

But on April 29, 1987, Mrs. Massip finally "snapped," said her father, Ed DeLeon.

That morning the same home from her father's to relieve her husband, who had been up all night with the baby.

After her husband, Alfredo Massip, went to bed, Mrs. Massip said she heard voices telling her to put the baby "out of his [illegible]."

She picked up the infant and threw him into the oncoming morning traffic.

When that didn't work she hit him over the head with a blunt instrument. Finally, the frantic mother put the baby down and ran back over twice with the family Volvo.

After dumping little Michael's mangled body in a neighborhood trash bin, Mrs. Massip went back home and told her husband that a one-armed woman kidnapped the baby at gunpoint.

Alfredo Massip testified that he didn't believe the story his wife told him and the police. When he asked her, "Where's the baby?" she paused, then "her first words were, 'I'll get to hell.'" said Massip.

"She said that about three times," he testified. "Then she told me that she had run over the baby."

Massip divorced his wife after her arrest.

Defense attorney Milton Grimes argued that Mrs. Massip suffered from postpartum psychosis, commonly known as the baby blues, and was insane at the time she killed her baby.

But Deputy District Attorney Harriet Salarno disagreed. "I think there probably is such a thing as postpartum psychosis, but this isn't it," he said.

"This is a woman who murdered her child and then engaged in a grand kidnapping cover-up story that was timed and coherent.

"She's not crazy. She appears to be normal today," said Salarno.

"I've talked with women who have killed their babies and the ones who were suffering from this illness are suffering for life," Salarno said.

"They weren't the bouncy women we see in court today."

The jury debated the mother's fate for five days before finding her guilty of second-degree murder.

Mrs. Massip faces a maximum of 16 years to life when

They managed to climb into the dinghy, but violent waves tossed them back into the water. While they were swimming back to the dinghy, the sharks struck. Conroon said he saw

BUGGED!

Space aliens are spying on individuals, politicians, military installations and anything else that interests them with bugging devices that fly!

Top UFO expert's shocking claim: Space aliens use flying spheres of light to spy on us

That's the mind-blowing claim of top UFO expert Paul Klein, who says the extraterrestrial bugs look like spheres of light and have been spotted in places as diverse as the Kremlin, Cape Canaveral and Washington, D.C.

By RAGAN DUNN

The implications of this phenomenon are staggering, the West German researcher told reporters in Stuttgart.

There is evidence in three nations that UFOs are keeping an eye on not only our thoughts as well as our speech and activities as well.

They were photographed while observing the launches of both the Soviet and American space shuttles. They have also been seen at sports events and other gatherings such as the Kremlin Party Congress, Peking and Washington, D.C.

Klein said the space bugs are generally described as being disc shaped and ranging from the size of a silver dollar to four feet across.

They were first photographed back in the 1960s but edged and have been kept busy in growing frequently since.

In one dramatic speculation a UFO was observed near a Soviet submarine as it was SPYING spheres of light have been sighted over the U.S. Capitol, at a Cape Canaveral space shuttle launching and near a Russian submarine in the Pacific Ocean.

cruising in the Pacific, totally disrupting its electronics, said Klein.

The discs also caused alarm when they appeared at this year's exhibition of the Russian and American space shuttles.

But they don't limit their spying to alien and military installations. They watch regular people as well.

There are literally thousands of reports of individuals having encountered the discs," continued the expert. "Many have even had conversations with them."

Klein has hundreds of snapshots some of which have suggested that the discs are merely reflections of lights in crafts that are manufactured by man.

But Klein insists that the discs are real beyond any reasonable doubt and possess information the ugly ships have brought back from Earth.

Honeymooning hubby accused of killing bride!

Couple argued after she learned he'd lied about being rich, say cops

A young bride was shot dead and dumped in a woods by her new hubby — during their honeymoon, said cops!

"Till death do us part" came only six days after Cynthia Loure and Kareem Abbas were entwined in Youngstown, Ohio.

They quarreled while en route to Tarpon Springs, Fla., and he pumped [illegible] into her car in Tarpon Springs, Fla., said sheriff's Capt. John Bertino.

"He had lied to her this big several shots into her chest, [illegible] about being wealthy and owning a lot of land in Florida," said Capt. Bertino. "When she found out he had lied, they argued."

Abbas, 22, said cops, he drove around for about an hour before shooting his wife's corpse in neighboring Hernando County.

After the slaying, Abbas drove to Ocean City, New Jersey, the [illegible]-ridden groom contacted the U.S. Embassy in Monaco City and admitted the crime, said Capt. Bertino.

FBI agents brought Abbas back to Florida, where he led them to the decaying body of his 20-year-old bride.

"He just went [illegible] up to be a big shot and when his bride found out he hadn't been honest with her, she threatened to leave him," said Capt. Bertino.

"He apparently couldn't handle that."

Abbas was being held without bail in the Pinellas County Jail on a first-degree murder charge.

Fierce eagle stalks kiddies

Authorities ordered school children kept indoors after an eagle with an eight-foot wing span was spotted circling over a town.

The 5-year-old female eagle with razor-sharp talons escaped from its owner, Mario Barradell of Derby, England, when a firecracker frightened the bird.

Police described the eagle as "very dangerous," saying it would easily have killed a child.

The search finally ended six hours after it began when the eagle returned to its owner's garden for dinner.

‘Space alien’ baby gets new life — thanks to space age surgery

Little Holly Drew was born with a skull so deformed she looked like a tiny alien from outer space.

By SUSAN HARRISON

But thanks to the skill of her doctors and the latest space age surgical techniques, the courageous 4-year-old now can look forward to a normal life.

"I used to try to cover Holly up with hats and blankets to hide her from people," admits told the London, England, girl's mother, Anne Drew. "People stared at her and at first they would avert their eyes and cross the street when they saw us.

"Now I don't mind taking her out any more. In fact, it's a pleasure to have her with me because she is so happy with her new face."

Holly was born with a rare condition called a craniofacial skull. She had large bulges on each side of her face, a narrow domed skull, protruding eyes, pushed-down ears and almost no nose.

Her skull was abnormally hard and inside it fluids had built up to such dangerous levels that they threatened to cause permanent brain damage.

"Her birth was the most traumatic experience of our lives," Anne recalled.

Doctors began working on little Holly just a few weeks after her birth. So far she has had 17 operations, and doctors say she needs many more. Because her condition is so rare, doctors made medical history almost every step of the way.

First, fluid was drained from Holly's skull to relieve pressure on her brain. Then her jawbone was shortened and rebuilt and her eye sockets were enlarged to contain her protruding eyes.

Before her eyes used to pop right out and the lid would get trapped behind the eyeball," Anne said. "It was incredibly painful and she would scream as we pushed it back.

Later doctors built a nose and a new forehead for Holly and enlarged her skull to make room for her growing brain. Holly took great to her new face and doctors say she'll look even better when they finish up with more surgery.

None of Holly's surgery seems seemed to have done her any harm. "said the little girl's delighted mum. "She is an extremely happy child."

THEN AND NOW. Holly was born with a horribly deformed skull shaped like a cone-head

Wife tracks rich ex-hubby for five years — for child support!

A wealthy professor who spent five years on the lam rather than pay child support was sentenced to two years behind bars after his ex-wife tracked him down.

William Fitzsimmons, a 47-year-old former physics professor at the University of Wisconsin, still owes his ex-wife, Mary Ann, over $100,000 for their divorce property settlement, child support and interest.

Prosecutor Don Anderson of Madison said Fitzsimmons and his wife were divorced in 1980.

The professor, who owned a high-tech firm that manufactured lasers for eye surgery, paid $1,500 a month for support of the couple's three children until 1982.

Then Fitzsimmons completely vanished, leaving behind his family and an unpaid lawyer of $27,000. For the next five years Fitzsimmons lived on the run. While authorities could find no trace of him, his ex-wife tracked him to Costa Rica before catching up with him last year in Tampa, Fla.

Returned to Wisconsin to stand trial on a felony charge of non-support, Fitzsimmons argued that his divorce was invalid because his wife didn't say "so help me God" when she was sworn in to testify that the marriage was irretrievably broken.

Jurors took just 80 minutes to convict Fitzsimmons.

At sentencing, Fitzsimmons told Judge Robert Polasnsky that giving him anything less than the maximum sentence would show the state was willing to compromise on child-support cases.

The judge agreed with Fitzsimmons and gave him the maximum of two years in prison.

1. Food Groups are divided into 8 colors of cards.
Meals are Red, Breads – Brown, Vegetables – Green, Fats – Yellow, Dairy – White, Fruits – Pink. The back of each card lists the food equivalents that card is worth. For example, one bread (brown) card is worth a slice of bread, a dinner roll, half a bagel, half a bun, a half cup of pasta, a tortilla, etc.

2. You start each day with a set number of cards of each color.
For example, if you want to lose at average or above, you start off each day with 4 Red cards, 4 Brown, 2 White, 4 Green, 4 Pink, 4 Yellow.

3. Whenever you eat a meal or a snack, you "play" the appropriate cards.

Flying tot thinks he's Superman!

Daredevil tyke Oliver Hall soared out his bedroom window like his personal hero Superman — but fortunately wasn't hurt when he landed 20 feet below.

The Burnwood, England, 4-year-old told one of his little friends he didn't even need a cape to fly, but he found out differently.

"I looked outside and he was lying in the garden crying," said his mother, Pamela. "I screamed to my husband to call an ambulance and they rushed him to the hospital for X rays.

"Luckily there wasn't even a scratch on him.

"I think it'll have to keep him from watching Superman and get some tricks put on the windows."

Face transplants!

TRANSPLANT surgeons are perfecting their techniques for putting gorgeous faces like this onto ordinary people.

Someday soon you can look like this!

By SUSAN ANDISON

Within just a few years, you'll be able to fix your sagging, wrinkled face — by trading it in on a new one through a face transplant!

Already the miracle of high-tech medicine is on the verge of offering face transplants for folks whose mugs are destroyed by burns or injuries.

Plastic surgeons say they have perfected a technique for transplanting an entire face from one person to another. It's just a matter of time before they can peel the face off a dead donor and reattach it to the skull of a disfigured patient.

"It's like a strip peel with a complete graft onto another skull," explained surgeon Ray Lindsay of the Mount Vernon Hospital in Middlesex, England. "The experimental work already done has proved the transplants are potential technically.

"It's just a question of waiting for someone who is prepared to accept the operation."

The startling new technology would be handled like any other organ donor system, but has fascinating possibilities.

Other women, for example, might have a face transplant for romantic purposes. The face of a younger donor could be peeled off like the skin of an orange and molded over the facial bones of the older patient, giving her supple, youthful skin without wrinkles.

Burn victims whose faces are covered with scars would have their own damaged flesh replaced by the face of a donor and instantly become normal again.

Genetic malformations, disfiguring injuries, even blemishes and birthmarks could be treated by using face transplants.

The procedure may already be in secret use among agents of police and intelligence agencies worldwide. Face transplants would make it possible even to change an agent's facial features and coloration to hide his identity.

Dr. Sanders is anxious for face transplants to come into more general use so that procedures can be perfected and surgeons can learn how to prevent rejection of donor faces.

"There comes a point where you must shift from the experimental model to the human model," he said. "The further away the genetic identity of the two individuals concerned, the greater the speed of the rejection.

"With skin, for instance, there are something like 80 factors that need to be matched in order to do a transplant."

While rejection can be combated with drugs, experts say, practice in doing hundreds of face transplants will help doctors streamline the procedure and maximize chances that the face transplant won't take.

Man hid fortune in milk cartons

A man who claimed he was broke while he was alive had stuffed a stash of gems and cash in empty milk cartons worth a whopping $1,000,000.

Carpenters tearing up the rug in the Göteborg, Sweden, home of the deceased man found 34 milk cartons crammed with valuables hidden in the attic.

Authorities believe the man hid away the treasure to avoid paying taxes.

Amazingly, even the man's son and heir was unaware of the fabulous booty.

Human kidneys sell for $446!

Trade Range Beer Advisement has begun an extensive business paying poor folks a fortune — for their kidneys.

Incredibly, the brewery for Advisement "Organ Beer" offers $44,000 for a kidney to be used transplanted into a rich rich patient.

Amazingly, West German authorities say the beer businessman's offer is not illegal.

Advisement got the idea when he learned that 4,000 sick folks in Europe die needed yearly in West Germany, but only 1,700 are performed because there is a lack of organs.

Horrified wife hears hubby die while talking to him on phone!

Truck slams into roadside booth he's calling from

By JACK ALEXANDER

Thoughtful hubby Jack Davies was calling his wife from a roadside phone booth when a four-ton truck slammed into it — and crushed him to death.

"He had spoken to me for about three minutes and then the line went dead," said his grief-stricken wife, Dawn. "I thought he had just run out of money."

Jack, 35, had stopped at the phone booth near Gunnislake, England, to tell his wife he would be late and not to worry. "He said he had had a good journey and would be with me soon," said heartbroken Dawn.

Seconds later Jack was a mangled mess, crushed under the wheels of a huge truck that had swerved off the road to dodge another truck and car. He died instantly.

Parts of the wrecked phone booth were hurled 30 yards into a field.

"He always phoned home on his way back from a trip to let me know he was safe," said Dawn, 31, hugging their 18-month-old son.

"Then the police came and told me he was dead," she said tearfully. "It's like a horrible dream."

LADY HITS A HOMER

By DICK DONOVAN

Move over Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Joltin' Joe DiMaggio. Here comes Patricia Brown — the first woman to be enshrined in the Baseball Hall of Fame!

Patricia Brown? A woman? In the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown?

No way, you say! Wrong!

In a special ceremony in Cooperstown, N.Y., Patricia "Spec" Brown became the first woman to take an honored place in baseball's sacred memorial to the past greats of the game.

"It was the most gratifying experience of my life," the 56-year-old former star pitcher for the Battle Creek (Mich.) Belles told The NEWS. "It brought back a flood of memories.

"I never in my wildest dreams thought that somehow I would be in the Hall of Fame.

"I didn't even think we were doing anything special," said the former queen of the baseball.

It was back in the 1950s that the All-American Girls Baseball League folded (with the Belles, Rainmakers, Lassies, Chicago Colleens and others that boasted players such as the speed-and-dirt team of Dottie Kamenshek and Jean Faut) after 12 years of operation.

They had returned to nearly every girl's childhood fantasy: playing baseball. But behind the glamour was a tough, all-male coaching staff that demanded long hours of practice and strict rules of conduct.

Spec was a pitcher with a "strong arm and a real live fastball," she said. "There weren't many women around who had strong arms, but I did."

She was a demon on the mound and a terror at the plate. How many pitchers in major league baseball history can boast a career batting average of .250? Pat can.

When that career finally ended, Pat went to Cooperstown.

Today, four daughters later, she is assistant librarian at Suffolk University in Boston, Mass.

Pat never married. But for a couple of years she spent her summers in Cooperstown.

There they will see another athlete wait in the Hall of Fame who also started in baseball, the other girls who took to the field in the glory days of the All American Girls Baseball League.

Librarian is the first woman inducted into Baseball Hall of Fame

HISTORIAN Patricia Brown has joined the baseball immortals like Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth and Joe DiMaggio in the Hall of Fame.

Dad attacks woman as his little girl watches

By JACK ALEXANDER

A woman was brutally beaten, dragged into the woods and raped by a man — as his tiny daughter watched in horror.

[illegible] the child to shut up or he might give her a dose of the same medicine," said Nassau Police Chief Kevin Beary.

The victim was battered so badly she spent two days in a hospital. "She put up a good fight," said Police Sgt. Robert Parker.

Her nightmare began after her car broke down on I-95 in Newington just about 12:45 a.m. Two bearded strangers pulled up in a blue Trans-Am sedan and dragged her into the car.

The victim told police she tussled with [illegible] during the attack. When she awakened the rapist was gone, said Chief Beary.

The bleeding woman ran about 800 feet and knocked at four houses before someone answered her pleas for help.

Cops haven't caught the rapist who is 35 to 40 years old with curly brown hair, a receding hairline and a beard. He was wearing a blue mail and red plaid shirt.

The child was with him in what's a 4 years old.

Outraged mom of stillborn baby sues hospital

Woman gives birth in a bedpan!

By SUSAN JIMISON

Pamela Seitz is suing the hospital where she lost her stillborn fetus, claiming she tried for 20 minutes to get nurses to come to her aid before she gave birth in a bedpan.

The 33-year-old woman says that when help finally did come at Humana Hospital-University in Louisville, Ky., one of the nurses yelled at her, "Shut up, you're disturbing the other patients."

A lawyer for the hospital, attorney David Monahan, denied that Mrs. Seitz waited more than a few seconds after she called for help. And he says the nurse only asked Mrs. Seitz to "be quiet" so she could find out what was going on.

But Mrs. Seitz's attorney, Kenneth Sales, brought a suit against the hospital alleging "outrageous conduct" and recently the Kentucky Court of Appeals cleared the way for a trial in the case.

"The nurses' conduct caused my client emotional problems at the time and afterwards," Sales told The NEWS. "Our complaint is with how she was treated."

According to the lawsuit, Mrs. Seitz entered Humana Hospital 11 days before the baby's delivery. Her water had broken and doctors confined her to a bed on the obstetrics ward. The night before the incident, Mrs. Seitz says she complained several times to nurses about pains in her abdomen.

The following morning, according to the suit, Mrs. Seitz began to have very strong pains. She says she and her roommate tried to hail the nurses, but the staff had deactivated her intercom buzzer.

"For 15 or 20 minutes they tried to get the hospital staff," Sales said. "Her roommate ran into the hall and screamed for help — but they couldn't find anyone. After 15 minutes or so she gave birth to the baby in her bedpan. About five minutes later nurses came into the room. By then Pam was somewhat hysterical. A nurse told her to shut up."

Monahan said there was no evidence that the buzzer had been disconnected and argued that the entire delivery process could have taken only minutes.

"There was no delivery as such — it was a miscarriage," he said. "She was not alone, either — the nurses responded in enough."

Is this incredible carved relic from the lost

12,000-year-old crystal

By ERIC THOMPSON

A 12,000-year-old intricately carved quartz crystal skull, which is believed to be an artifact from the lost continent of Atlantis, can heal the terminally ill, its present owner claims.

"This is truly a remarkable relic from a very ancient time in the world's history," said 51-year-old Anna Mitchell-Hedges.

"It has absolutely incredible properties — properties for which, seemingly, there is no scientific explanation.

"In the more than half-century it's been in my possession, time and time again I have watched in awe as the energy that apparently radiates from the skull has healed individuals who say they've been told they're terminally ill or permanently disabled.

"Among those who just want to touch the skull and meditate, some say they can feel its power surging through their bodies — and they even catch glimpses of the future."

The life-size skull, carved from quartz crystal, was discovered by the woman in 1924 while she and her adventurer father, F.A. Mitchell-Hedges, were excavating the ruins of the 1,500-year-old Mayan center of Lubaantun in Central America.

"I'll never forget that magical moment when I first saw this awe-inspiring artifact shimmering in the morning light," Anna said.

"I found it under a Mayan altar that had been covered by a collapsed wall. I was particularly struck by the fact that the lower jaw is movable. My father believed that the Mayans may have used it as an oracle."

However, he was also convinced that Mayan hands had not fashioned the artifact — because such a detailed sculpture would require diamond-tipped tools, since diamonds are the only material that can carve quartz crystal.

"And those kinds of tools just didn't exist in that day and age," Anna explained.

"Naturally, there are some skeptics who claim the skull is a fake," she continued, "but scientists at the California labs of Hewlett-Packard have estimated it's about 12,000 years old.

"Now, the only advanced civilization we know of that may have existed that long ago is the fabled lost world, Atlantis, which sank beneath the waves in a series of violent earthquakes and floods.

"Some people believe the skull was created by survivors of that disaster, who carried it to Central America and passed it down through the generations to the Mayans.

"Others say it was created by a race of beings from another planet who visited Earth in ancient times.

"Whatever the truth, the skull is definitely a powerful healing force.

"Many people who have been told they're terminally ill have come to me and said they've been cured after touching the skull and meditating.

"Others who just want to touch the skull and meditate, some say they can feel its power surging through their bodies — and they even catch glimpses of the future."

Shopper trampled at carpet sale gets $100G

Jurors awarded a woman $100,000 for the injuries she suffered when she went to a carpet store remnant sale — and got trampled by a mob of bargain-hungry shoppers!

The bizarre tragedy struck after 86-year-old Patty Irven and her husband, Richard, showed up for an anniversary sale at Remnant King, a carpet store was holding its 18th anniversary sale and on all the remnants were $18 apiece," said Joseph O'Donnell, the Irvens' attorney. "They had 40 rugs on sale and over 200 people lined up to buy them."

O'Donnell said the Irvens went to Remnant King to buy a rug for their children's playroom.

a warehouse where the sale was to take place," the attorney said.

"A rope had been strung across the entrance to keep customers back until the sale started.

"Suddenly someone cut the rope and it all broke loose," said O'Donnell.

"Mrs. Irven was knocked to the crowd surged forward," said the attorney.

O'Donnell argued that the 1984 incident would not have happened if the store had provided better security for the sale.

The jury deliberated for less than two hours before awarding $100,000 to Mrs. Irven and $30,000 to her hus-cient of Atlantis. This lost continent reportedly extended almost to the coast of Central America."

The mysterious and priceless crystal skull is now kept on a velvet-draped altar in Anna's home in Kitchener, Ontario, Canada.

"For years, people have been able to visit here to touch it — and it's helped them," she said. "And I want that to continue after I've gone.

"I was going to leave it to a museum, but when I learned a similar skull at the British Museum is kept under glass, I decided to set up a foundation that will see to it that my crystal skull will be used as it always has — to benefit mankind."

Guy who had sex change gives back skiing medal he won as a woman

Austrian skier Eric Schinegger is one heck of a good sportsman.

The 1966 winner of a world championship downhill race, he's given up his gold medal to the runner-up in the match because, as he explained, he skied under false colors.

Eric, you see, was Ericka back then — and the race he won 22 years ago was a women's event.

But now that he's had a sex-change operation, he wanted to ease his conscience.

"I won the world championship race as a woman," he explained. "But, without realizing it, I was a man. That's why the medal doesn't belong to me."

The runner-up, Marielle Goitschel, revealed that the gal skiers had nicknamed Schi-Ericka "Animus, because she looked a bit like a man."

Gal packs up and leaves the country to get away from love pest

By SUSAN JAMESON

Sexy Jill Dixon has packed up and left town to escape the attentions of a lovesick sailor who would rather go to jail than give up wooing her.

The 20-year-old secretary from Sidmouth, England, has battled in the courts for years to keep seaman David Custance from pestering her, but nothing the courts could do would end his courtship.

Now she's taken a job in a foreign land to escape the attentions of Custance, who swears he'll marry his ladylove whether she likes it or not.

"My daughter has had to leave home because of all of this," sobbed Jill's mother, Muriel Dixon, as she testified in the latest in a series of court cases against Custance. "Jill told him she didn't want to go out with him. She said she hated the sight of him and wished he would leave her alone. Now she's emigrated from abroad, hoping to escape him."

Lovesick David Custance

The lovelorn sailor's stubborn pursuit of Jill has made headlines for years now. Last January the pair were the subject of a BBC-TV article describing the [illegible] has been jailed again for battering Jill.
